

Sibanye-Stillwater Wins Standard Bank Top Women Business in Resources, Construction & Infrastructure Development 2023 Award

Special Projects Manager, Fatima Collins, receiving the award from the accomplished former Miss Universe, Zozibini Tunzi.

We are thrilled to celebrate Sibanye-Stillwater's recent award, a testament to the Company's important role in promoting gender empowerment within South Africa and beyond. Our unwavering commitment has been recognised on the global stage, showcasing the invaluable impact we have made in propelling women to prominent economic positions and uplifting our nation.

"This award is not just for Sibanye-Stillwater; it's for every woman whose potential we are committed to nurturing," says Nicola Jackson, chairperson of Women of Sibanye-Stillwater (WoSS). Through our WoSS initiative, Sibanye-Stillwater addresses inequalities and barriers to female employment and ensures our organisation treats women fairly, acknowledging that we must play our part in balancing what has historically been a male-dominated industry.

In the South African operations, the percentage of women in mining and in the workforce has increased to 17%. The Company is commended, and we recognise this is more than an award—it's a beacon for further advancement.

It pushes the organisation forward, inspiring continued efforts to enhance women's autonomy and elevate their status across the business landscape and society at large.

Congratulations to the Women of Sibanye-Stillwater (WoSS), on this well-deserved recognition. Your journey continues to pave the way for a more equitable future.
